

UNIVERSITY OF ANBAR EDUCATION POLICY

Education Policy

University of Anbar is committed to extending valuable educational opportunities and resources to a diverse community. On an annual basis, it provides a variety of complimentary courses that are open to individuals from various backgrounds. These courses encompass activities like public lectures and community educational events, all hosted on the university campus and equipped with essential facilities, including computer access.

Furthermore, the central library at the University of Anbar serves as a knowledge hub accessible to all. Within the library, individuals have unrestricted access to electronic resources, connecting them to fields such as social sciences and history. This accessibility empowers individuals to explore an extensive wealth of information, thus broadening their knowledge across a wide range of subjects.

Using modern methods in free courses

University of Anbar offers a tuition-free program aimed at improving participants' skills in Microsoft Office software, including applications like Excel, Word, Data Show, and PowerPoint. Upon successfully finishing this program, participants will receive certificates from the University of Anbar as recognition of their achievements.

Providing an electronic library to assist researchers

In today's rapidly changing world, we are witnessing a profound and sudden revolution in the realm of Information and Communication Technology (ICT) and e-publishing. These advancements have brought about significant changes in the dissemination of information, leading to a surge in innovations and a substantial increase in electronic information sources in various formats. As a result, libraries and information centers are confronted with the urgent task of consistently updating their content, improving their collections, and enhancing their services. Additionally, researchers' diverse needs, combined with the abundance and diversity of global information, have given rise to a range of contemporary trends to address the demands of the information age. In response to these developments, electronic libraries have emerged as comprehensive repositories of diverse information sources, supported by advanced retrieval systems. Recognizing these dynamics, the Department of Electronic Library is a modern initiative established by the Secretariat and the Central Library at the University of Anbar to effectively serve the needs of researchers and beneficiaries in this ever-evolving landscape.

Outreach Activities & access to these activities
